A ROYAL HOMECOMING. (The New York Herald prints the English poet laureate's state poem on the return of the Duke and Duchess of York. The poem, which is a tribute to the Duke and Duchess, is no better and no worse than the stuff Mr. Austin has been pining off on a long-suffering public.)

Where, unforgotten, love, Victoria sleeps; But not with happy pride your father's name; Your mother weeps! You went and came as swallows homeward draw, Now it hath winged its way to winter's door; But never swallow or wandering sea bird saw What you have seen.

For you have evelled earth with pinions fleet, The seasons through; and everywhere a throng Of glad hearts your coming trooped to greet With flowers and song.

Over the unchanging sea eight changed-ful moons Have moved from shield to sickle, seed to harvest; And twice a hundred dawns, a hundred noons, A hundred eves

Wanted to their slumber in the starlit night; And ever from land or lake, from wave or crag, From faxed or floating fort you had in sight The British flag.

And wider, further onward round the world, Scouring the field or furrowing the sea, You found that emblem, which, where'er unfurled, Floats o'er the free:

So that on man and man's laborious No manacle nor hindrance shall be laid, But mind with mind and strand with strand Contented trade.

And though the shade of treasonable strife Falls on our homes and theirs you, wandering saw, Young commonwealths you found, surging with life, Yet ruled by law.

Whose blood infused in ours in war's empire, To vindicate our sceptre, swords and tongue As ours, perchance may help to keep them wise, Hath made us young.

Fountain of youth England in mellow years Hath found and drained, so that she ne'er need know When autumn stacks What nature feels when autumn stacks Or the gusts blow.

You sailed from us to them, from them to us, Love at the prow and Wisdom at the helm, Augmenting, which you strengthen thus, Her rule and realm!

Round you today a people stand arrayed That faith with peace two wedded words would do; Therefore rejoicing mightier hath been made, Imperial power!
